

I think it is unfair to try and limit the traffic and weather stations on XM radio, a terrific new technology that my family has embraced. We still listen to local radio, but we enjoy satellite radio the most. Local programming needs to step up to the plate and update their formats to survive, because in Kokomo, the best station around is country and I don't listen to it. The other stations have room for improvement. I also enjoy being able to listen to talk radio on my XM, which is not locally available here. So I say quit picking on the new guy, just because they are successful.
